It was very dull and quiet in this city atter 9 o'clock, Tuesday might. The streets were descrited and there were no late stayers except the few who never know when to go home. One cafe propractor states that it has been very dull ever since July 4, and that his receipts always fall off for a week after a holalay.

There was a big crowd at thefreeshow at Melway Park, however, and the cars were filled at 10 o'clock with the people returning to this city. The show this week includes a singer and two teams, which give satisfaction. The audience on Tuesday night was nearly half made up of summer guests in the homes in this

There is somethour about the walk at the corner of Mulberry street and Fulton street which gets people into trouble. The lattest accident, was that which beiell a drunken man. He walked unsteaddy to an open-headed barrel and sat on it until he lost his balance and fell backward and slipped down into it, sbutting up his avourdupois like a packknile. He couldn't release himselt and be couldn't shake the barrel over. His position was hast having a sobering effect on him when a boy beloed him out of the barrel.

ALBANY, July 12 .- Attorney General Davies departed from Albany last might for New York, intending this afternoon to travel from that city to Oyster Bay. where he will hold a conference with Governor Roosevelt upon the reports sub-mitted by Austen G. Fox, Wallace Macfarlane and Benjamin G. Shove in rela-tion to their discoveries concerning the conduct of George W. Aldridge, ex-superatendent of public works, and Campbell W. Adams, ex-state engineer, when they were charged with the duty of expending $9,000,000 in canal improvements. Governor Roosevelt, it is believed, has for some time had in his possession the re-port of Messrs. Fox and Macfarlane and, it is thought, will receive that of Mr. Shove from the hands of the attorney general tonight. Messrs. Fox, Macfarlane and Shove donot appear to have been at all backward about talking concerning the re-suits of their labors, and what they have said is all of one tenor. It is generally understood that they have decided and will report to Governor Roosevelt that there is no ground for prosecu-tion in the courts of Mr. Aldridge and Always there, Dixon's, Baum's Mr. Adams. When a friend does you a good tern-stops your run-a-way horse. below to put out the fire that threat ens your house, or comes to your rescue with a generous loan just when your financial outlook is very darkyou feel like taking him by the hand and thanking him for his kindness toward you. But how much greater would have seen your gratitude had your friend saved you from an untimely death at the hands of an enemy. You would not feel less grateful were your wife and children raised from a bed of sickness or rescued from a life of pain and suffering. Not everyone can save the drowning or heal the sick, but each one of us can do something to lighten the bur dens and smooth the pathway for his neighbors and friends. Mrs. Charlette Eig is one of the friends who wants to belp the suffering by showing them how she was benefitted. She was very ill as a result of chronic nervousness , and was cured. She

"I feel it is a pleasure as well as a duty to inform my friends the means I used to regain my health. I have been troubled a great deal with nervous headsches, and recently I became so bad that I suffered congestion of the brain. The least excitement caused dreadful pains, and I would frequently lose all control of my nerves. I consulted several physicians, but could get no relief whatever. Finally I began using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. Within a week I could see an improvement in my condition and a few more bottles of these wonderful remedies made a new woman of me. Now I consider my health good ant can do any kind of work."

IT seems proper to preface the brief chapter of life in India with a word of caution, for the tale is grewsome. It is a story from life, a reminiscence of the early colonial days, and forms one of a series of tales illustrating the march of British power in the East and his hearers into a religious frenzy, ndian empire. The Waziris are a tribe and then, at the height of it, sprung on nhabiting Afghanistan, which was transferred to the British in 1894, In their manner of dealing with the voman question the Waziris are oldfashioned. With them, above all peoples, chastity is the virtue of woman courage of the man. There is no place among them for the wanton or the coward; and the expression of public opinion seems to be founded on some such maxim as "The dead sin no and earth and pebbles completed the tomb, and effectually wiped out every Ludlow, the doctor, Gordon, my subaltern, and myself were sitting outside the little fort smoking after one of the scrubby dinners of the country, and straggling away two or three miles Bakshan Khan, who had been invited to share our cheroots, was smoking with us. Lucilow had spent a 13-hour day tramping after clusive Markhor, in in the course of which he had climbed to 7,000 feet above the sea level, and, tough as he was, was very tired. He showed no wish to tell us of his sport, which had been confined to fleeting glimpses of distant Markhor; but, somewhat wearily, he told us that he had come across the bones of a woman in the soft sand under the lee of . bowlder at the mouth of a very ugly gorge; bones curiously shatteredskull, arms, legs, ribs, not a bone whole, And the sepoys who were acting as his shikarris had spat on the hones and to journey on with their merchandise. covered them again, and would tell him nothing, only that the gorge was called and took to the jungle, following the regiment. held by the English, there was a sahib in command named Grierson. Perhaps it was 15, perhaps 20, years ago. "What is time to us who only know day and night, summer and winter?" He was a brave man, but reckless. He loved women too well. He also drank and smoked very much, but was never a bit weaker for it. In those days the caravans passing down had to fight for it all the way along the Waziri border. and it was out in the broad bed of the Kuch, where the rivers meet, that they lay safest under the rifles of the little post, as it then was-only one-third as big as it is now, and not half as many men in it. Often the party at the por used to sally out to fire on raiders, and more often wounded traders used to drop in at the post to be healed of gunshot, sword and spear wounds. The days were by no means dull. To a man of Grierson's nature a life of hard living, fighting, drinking and no woman to cheer him was but fuel to fire.

Grierson was not a sentimentalist. to women are not sentimentalists, and they do not usually make the worst husbands. One day there had been a dash on a caravan at early dawn and a pursuit. Grierson had aucceeded in overtaking and shooting a Mahsud Waziri, who bore away a girl on his camel, and she lay fainting from its fall, for it dropped dead, shot at the same time as its master. Grierson went to her aid and found her beautiful.

eaving the forsaken woman sitting fororn on the sand and stones from which e had taken her two years before. He did not think he was acting un cindly. He had found her poor, as he left her rich. No doubt, too, he felt a pang at parting. But as soon as he was gone the women of the tribe fell on her. She retaliated on them, scofling at their dirt and savagery, and refused to do the old menial offices. She refused, too, to marry any one of the men, who would have been quite content to take her for her wealth. Then the men turned, too. The women began to teach them to regard her as a spy in the camp, and the inevitable Mullah quickly let it be known that she was a eretic from the faith-whatever that
